By Dan Weston

In the tranquil realm of jazz, John and Linda Trinckes emerge as a seamless duo crafting original compositions that delve into the heart of this melodic genre. Linda, the lyrical architect, and John, the maestro behind composition and mastering, intertwine their talents to weave a unique auditory experience.

"You Make Me Smile" initiates the journey, an undeniably smooth piece exuding mellowness. Yet, within its tranquility lies an intriguing, almost haunting quality. The delivery of the lyrics amplifies an enigmatic allure, leaving a distinctive imprint upon the listener. Following suit, "Live Your Best Life" resonates, its xylophonic composition paradoxically juxtaposed against its resoundingly positive lyrics. The dissonance creates an unusual, albeit compelling, impact that resonates beyond the expected boundaries.

Transitioning further into their repertoire, "The Blue Hour" unfurls with impeccable percussion and a fluid bass line. A distinct ambiance reminiscent of lounging poolside in mid-'70s Las Vegas permeates this track, evoking a vivid sense of nostalgia. There's an inherent cinematic quality woven into these melodies.

A tantalizing suggestion arises—subjecting these compositions to an extensive hall reverb might render them fitting for a poignant movie sequence. It's an appreciation that traverses an unexpected path, one that may not align precisely with the creators' intent.

Ultimately, the Trinckes emerge with a distinctive sonic identity. Their oeuvre beckons for exploration, inviting listeners to immerse themselves and uncover the nuances of their original sound. Dive in and discover the evocative world they've meticulously crafted.
